

HELSINGIN YLIOPISTO
HELSINGFORS UNIVERSITET
UNIVERSITY OF HELSINKI

Professor Ewa Morawska, University of Essex gives a presentation on

Different Modes of Immigrants' Integration into the Host Society: The Conceptual Framework and Empirical Illustrations

at the CEREN Colloquium
on Tuesday, November 17th, 17.00 – 19.00
at Snellmaninkatu 12 (Swedish School of Social Science)
in the “festsalen” room

WELCOME!

Ewa Morawska is a Professor of Sociology and the Co-Director of the Sociology MA Programme in Migration and Citizenship at the University of Essex in the U.K. Professor Morawska's interests are in the fields of international migration, immigration and ethnicity (policies, settlement, adaptation) in the context of globalization and in a historical-comparative perspective (Europe and North America, 19th-21st Century), American society (historical and contemporary), and East European societies in transition. Her areas of specialization are located within comparative-historical sociology, classical and contemporary social theory, and qualitative research methods. Her recent publications include “A Sociology of Immigration: (Re)Making of Multifaceted America,” Palgrave Macmillan (2009); “International Migration Research: Constructions, Omissions, and Promises of Interdisciplinarity,” Ashgate Press (ed. with M. Bommers, 2005); and “Exploring Diversity in Immigrant Assimilation and Transnationalism,” International Migration Review (2004).

CEREN, Centre for Research on Ethnic Relations and Nationalism, <http://sockom.helsinki.fi/ceren>